* The Grade 2 pupil who brought a fully loaded gun to school with the intention of shooting a fellow pupil following a confrontation will be taken for psychological assessment, the Gauteng education department has said. Department spokesperson Steve Mabona said the pupil, who is turning eight years old later this year, took the gun to school last Tuesday. Mabona said the police were called to the school. The gun was confiscated and the child was taken to Brakpan police station. The school's governing body decided that the pupil must be sent for psychological assessment. The assessment will be provided by the department.

* The National Prosecuting Authority (NPA) on Thursday welcomed the sentencing of a young man who pleaded guilty to having sexual intercourse with a donkey in Mount Fletcher, Eastern Cape. During his court appearance, 23-year-old Ntando Thembaletu Mankungwini said that he had sex with the animal because his traditional healer told him that it would make him a stronger man. Mankungwini was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment by the Mount Fletcher Magistrate's Court for bestiality. Mankungwini was caught in the act by the grandson of the owner of the donkeys who thought that he was attempting to steal the donkeys. The owner of the donkeys alerted the police, saving Mankungwini from an attempted assault by community members.

* Forty-nine hours after a group of Dutch tourists set foot in South Africa for a fun three-week holiday they returned battered and bruised to their home country after becoming the victims of yet another airport robbery. "We are safe now but we are in shock and want to go back. We just landed for a 22-day trip but the fun has gone," one of the passengers said. The group of 36 tourists, most of them over 60, left South Africa on a flight on Tuesday night and arrived back in Amsterdam around 10.30am on Wednesday - spending not even 50 hours in this country. The tourists, who arrived in South Africa on Sunday night, were robbed on their way from OR Tambo International Airport to their accommodation in Fourways. Their bus, they said, was stopped by a vehicle with police markings. One man was dressed in a police uniform, the other five in civilian clothing. Describing the experience as "hell", Bakker said the hands and feet of the bus driver and the tour leader were bound with cable ties. Five men boarded the bus and stole whatever they could. "People panicked, and firearms were aimed at them."

* A five-day-old baby girl died in Lansing, MI, USA, because her religious parents refused to get her medical treatment for a common newborn illness - jaundice. Now they're facing jail time. The Michigan couple felt they could pray away their newborn daughter's illness without taking her to a hospital. Rachel Piland, 30, and husband Joshua, 36, welcomed daughter Abigail via a midwife at their Lansing, MI, home. The woman returned the following day and saw the infant's skin had yellowed and the baby had developed jaundice, which means she could have been suffering from a liver problem. However, the deeply religious parents refused to seek medical attention for their baby and she died four days later. Now the couple has been charged with involuntary manslaughter.

end of an overcrowded bridge, with some people falling underfoot and being trampled, and being trampled, city police officer Rajaram Patel said. People were huddling under the canopy covering the bridge to escape heavy rains, making the deadly tragedy worse, said lawmaker Shaina Nana Chudasama of the governing Bhartiya Janata Party. Police said the stampede was triggered by a rumour that a pedestrian bridge collapsed after concrete chunks fell. Chaos prevailed as people surged forward to leave the bridge.

* Government contractors have started to build prototypes of President Trump's proposed border wall with Mexico. Bidding documents say four of the eight prototypes are to be solid concrete and four are to be made of "other materials". Mr Trump said on Friday that the wall should be see-through, repeating earlier claims that it should be transparent to curb the flow of drugs into the country. "They take drugs, literally, and they throw it - 100lbs of drugs - they throw it over the wall," he said at a rally in Alabama. "They have catapults. They throw it over the wall and it hits somebody on the head and you don't even know they are there. Believe it or not, this is the kind of stuff that happens. So you need to have a great wall but it has to be see-through." A green tarpaulin hanging on a chain-link fence blocked views of the work, in a remote area of San Diego, and is expected to last 30 days. The construction site is about two miles (3km) east of San Diego's Otay Mesa border crossing at the end of steel-mesh fencing that runs from the Pacific Ocean. The concrete designs will have openings to allow agents to see across the border.
